

that when one approaches the judgment of God, it is not fear that possesses him. The man who has not obeyed the Gospel is to feel the vengeance of God, the wrath of God (2The.1:8-9). To those who live a life of sin, "It is into the hands of the living God" (Heb. 10:31). Such men will be brought before the judgment seat of Christ, and it will be a thing of terror indeed!

This is not the case with the child of God. He has not lived in rebellion but rather has walked in the light (1John 1:7). He has not persisted in error but has made correction as mistakes were committed (1:9). His love for God caused him to keep the commandments of God, for love demands this (John 14:15). Upon his death, or upon the Lord's return, the child of God cannot be said to fall into the hands of God; he has not been found in rebellion and disobedience. Neither death, the judgment, or eternity caused him to fear as does the sinful person. Based, then, on his love for God, and his obedience to God, God's plan for him has been perfected, and he comes before the judgment bar of God "in boldness."

Now, that is a great blessing and the faithful child of God is aware of it and takes comfort in it. When his life ends it matters little where he is or the circumstances of it, for he will be found in faithfulness. It is, for him, entirely a promotion to wonderful and eternal things. The fear that he would have had, if he had continued in sin, has been removed because of love perfected in him, for "perfect love casteth out fear" (1John 4:18).

Boldness in the Day of Judgment

Bill Jackson

“Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment because as he is, so are we in this world” (1John 4:17). We note that the word is “boldness” and not “arrogance.” What does it mean? Admittedly, it sounds like a grand thing—that in the judgment we need not stand there in awful, trembling fear but rather we can be there in boldness. Let us look into it.

This is a context dealing with the facts that God is love (4:8), that God manifested His love toward man in the sending of His Son (4:9), that this love produced the everlasting atonement for our sins (4:10), and that as we have received this love from God, so we should manifest it toward Him, and toward others (4:11). John continues in pointing out that God is to dwell in us, and in us is His love perfected. The idea of love perfected is that of “being completed, being brought to maturity, reaching its ultimate.”

So, God loves us and desires to dwell in us. He then permits man to respond obediently to His love, to love God, to allow God to indwell us, and to manifest every good and godly trait toward other men. In this, John says that this love is perfected. It is the child of God living right with God and right with man.

Based on these considerations, John states (con’t)
